Are you willing to dance with the Spirit? What is the special thing that we are called to do to change the world? Does the company you keep share the same goals and values? What will you take a stand for? These are a few of the questions that Leonard Dow asked at ACC's Fall Youth Retreat on September 17-19 at Refreshing Mountain Camp.

Our walk with God is like a dance (compared to a wave). We have the choice to go with the Spirit or to sit it out and ignore the Spirit. To dance well, cooperation is needed from both ends. But, it is also okay at times to mess up because the Spirit is there to help catch us and put us back on track.

A lot of youth have a Facebook page. Some have a few people, but others have 500-600 people considered to be friends. I have a question for you though, "How many of those are truly your friends?"

Each one has a different standard of what makes a friend, but God's standard is that a true friend will lay down his/her life for you. Knowing that, how many friends do you have by God's standards???

On Sunday morning, Leonard shared that friends are just like family to you; they respect you for who you are and what you stand for; they are intentionally given to you by God. No matter if they agree with you, they are there to encourage you through everything.

Today, people can move far away, but they are still near via Skype, Facebook, Twitter, etc.

ACC Moderator's Reflections

Perhaps you have noticed that in many of our older and more established congregations there are fewer young adults present. If you haven't noticed, take a look around the church next Sunday and see just how many persons ages 20-40 are in the congregation!

This is certainly not the case in every ACC congregation or for all Christian churches across the country for that matter. Many newer and more urban churches actually have a good number of young adult worshipers in attendance.

God's spirit can be present in any group of two or three who gather for worship and fellowship in Christ's name no matter the ages of those present.

I believe for the church to be faithful to God's purposes in our world, we need to be concerned for this growing trend and listen very carefully to what the younger persons are saying. Otherwise, the strength, vitality and richness of our congregations are in jeopardy.

I am sure there are many reasons that vary from one congregation to another for the declining attendance of persons ages 20-40. We older, more seasoned members (50+) must begin by careful listening!

As a small beginning, the ACC Fall Assembly held at Forest Hills Mennonite on October 23 focused on the theme "Celebrating the Edge." The program included a panel of young adults responding to their concerns for the church. Keith Wilson, ACC Coordinator and chair of the recently formed Young Adult Task Force, delivered the main meditation. We look forward to the work of this committee and their recommendations to the Executive Committee on how to create greater involvement of younger persons in the life and witness of our conference.

Mennonite Church USA is also taking a step in addressing this issue by creating a full time denominational youth and young adult staff position.

In our own conference, Merv Stoltzfus, one of the conference ministers, devotes a portion of his time to youth. Under Merv's leadership over the years, the popularity of quizzing and youth retreats has grown significantly. As a result, the presence of middle and high school youth in our congregations remains strong and active. For this we are grateful.

How congregations respond to incorporating and strengthening the presence of younger adults and might I add, the presence of racial and ethnic persons, will clearly impact the viability of the church to fulfill God's mission in the world.

... WE MUST CALL OUR YOUNG ADULTS INTO CHURCH LEADERSHIP,
PROVIDE TRAINING, AND CRE-
DENTIALING TO DO GOD'S WORK.

The scripture notes that older women and men dream while the young see visions. Perhaps it is long over due to seriously bring younger persons of both genders into the very leadership of the congregation.

Our brightest and most talented younger persons need to be welcomed into the church and allowed to follow their visions.

As a community we must be calling our young adults into church leadership, providing training, and credentialing to do God's work.

Church structures and those who currently have positions of authority need to embrace the necessary changes for greater transformation.

We can trust God's presence and the discernment process in taking this step.

Change happens.
It always has!

Good friends will have disagreements, but getting through these challenges shows that you can get through anything with them! Family, Respect, Intentional, Encouraging, Near Disagreements, are the characteristics that a true FRIEND should have!

Leonard Dow told the story about little Ruby Bridges—the first African American girl to enter a white school. She walked to school every day with people watching her and yelling rude things at her. Not once did she say or do anything back. She did her best in school and achieved big things. What she did at age six was to take a really big stand for what she wanted.

So, I have to wonder, what will you stand for? How will you change the world? Who is really your friend? Are you willing to dance with the Spirit? What really is your dance?

Over 200 youth and youth leaders from ACC congregations attended the ACC annual fall youth retreat. Resource Speaker, Leonard Dow, shared during the four worship times on the theme, “When We Are Young.” He referred to Biblical stories of God at work in the lives of youth, and encouraged us to believe that God still desires to work in the lives of youth today!

We were blessed with beautiful weather all weekend which allowed for fabulous outdoor activity. Youth and leaders enjoyed the new zip lines, and the “Giant Swing” during activity times. There’s nothing like a late night zip line ride with only Tiki torches lighting the line! For the brave, there was the 10:00 p.m swim both nights in the 65° pool.

We are very blessed to have this faith-forming tradition for our youth.

Barbara Longenecker, Marilyn Denlinger, and Gwen Wenger Peachey.

Three mothers will present "What We Learned about Sexual Orientation that We Never Anticipated, but Are Grateful to Know," on November 13, 2010, at the Forest Hills Mennonite Church.

Marilyn Denlinger, Barbara Longenecker, and Gwen Wenger Peachey will share about living with sexual diversity and describe their lives as mothers of lesbian daughters. This is the first of the '10-'11 series of three Women's Sabbath Retreats under the theme of Voice Lessons: More Mother-Daughter Challenges. The mothers add, "As we journeyed with our daughters, we learned from their challenges about acceptance of them as they are created by God. Each of us tells our own story as we moved from shock at our daughter's revelation of her sexuality to our affirmation of her self-worth and gifts."

Marilyn, a member of Neffsville Mennonite Church, is a retired registered nurse. She and her husband of nearly 50 years, Ray, have a one grown son and daughter. Marilyn enjoys volunteering, regular exercise, flower gardening, reading and traveling.

Barbara's nursing and parenting experiences provided valuable lessons. Most recently she worked as an end-of-life nurse with Hospice of Lancaster County. Barbara and husband Charles now live at Landis Homes, enjoying retirement and volunteering. They attend New Holland Mennonite Church.

USING CONGREGATIONAL RESOURCES FOR A HEALTH MINISTRY TO BENEFIT YOUR CONGREGATION

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION: Where do members of your congregation turn when they have medical concerns but no insurance? How about members of the community? Can your congregation be a practical, hands-on, neighborhood ministry in an area of rapidly growing need? This breakfast and presentation provides clergy, church leaders, and anyone interested in faith-based community health with the opportunity to explore a congregational health ministry including "Nurse in the Congregation" programs. We'll answer questions like, Why would I want a ministry of health in my congregation? What is a "Nurse in the Congregation"? What would it look like? How do I get started?

FEATURING:

- A Nurse in the Congregation? And Other Models... Lilly Tryon, MSN, RN, Coordinator of the Berks Parish Nurse Network, presents scriptural support for ministries of healing, the role and function of parish nurses today, and resources available for developing and sustaining an effective health ministry
- A Day in the Life... Local parish nurses relate experiences from their ministry
- A Vision for a Medical Clinic... Lois Ann Mast, coordinator for the recently begun Twin Valley Medical Clinic

This program is FREE of charge!

Adventist WholeHealth Network will be available to schedule a no-cost assessment of your congregation's needs for a congregational health ministry.

Church Planters Resource Met in Baltimore

A Church Planters Resource event was sponsored by the Atlantic Northeast Conferences (ANEC) of Mennonite Church USA in October 2010 in Baltimore, Md. The gathering was a great blessing for all in attendance and provided a means for church planters hearing excellent teaching, listening to stories of God's call to church planting by a number of church planters, and also praying for each other in our various ministries.

Attendees came from New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Indiana, California, and Ontario. Worship service languages included Spanish, Creole/French, Amharic, Korean, Garifuna, and English. The Ethiopian Evangelical Church of Baltimore provided wonderful hosting for the event including an ethnic Ethiopian meal for Saturday's lunch.

A number of church planters voiced desire for future resource events that are similar where church planters learn from each other and hear teaching to grow an Anabaptist missional church planting vision. Jeff Wright, the main presenter, provided excellent teaching that was much appreciated across the numerous language and ethnic groups.

A generous grant was given by Mennonite Mission Network and Mennonite Church USA executive leadership to support this regional church planters event. ~ Warren Tyson, executive conference minister

Jeff Wright

ACC's Annual Vision Dinner will feature speaker Jeff Wright (Urban Expression North America) at Shady Maple on Monday, November 8, at 6:15 p.m. Register online at atlanticcoastconference.net or e-mail keithw@atlanticcoastconference.net or phone 717-394-8107. Jeff Wright, representing Urban Expression North America, will bring an inspiring message on sharing the Gospel from a missional Anabaptist perspective. Jeff was ordained in the Mennonite Church and has over 30 years of ministry experience. His current vocation is a pastor, urban community development executive, and church planting/missional church consultant. In 2009, having completed 20 years of service in regional and denominational church leadership as one of the founders of both the Center for Anabaptist Leadership, and the Pacific Southwest Mennonite Conference, Jeff returned to pastoral ministry. He now serves as pastor of the Madison Street Church in Riverside, California. This urban, missional, Anabaptist congregation has developed a variety of ministries to reach out to the heart of the city.

All Mennonite Church USA congregations will receive a free copy of the new Herald Press book Let the Children Come: Preparing Faith Communities to End Child Abuse and Neglect, thanks to a generous gift from an anonymous donor. The donor said, "I can't write a book on this topic, but I can help distribute this book to other churches so they can prevent what happened in my family." In a letter that accompanies the free copies, Mennonite Church USA Executive Director Ervin Stutzman commends the book, adding that as followers of Jesus "we want [children] to come to know him through our programs and activities—and also to be safe and secure in our churches. Let the Children Come can help us make sure that is the case." Let the Children Come was written by Jeanette Harder and is available for $12.99 from Herald Press at www.mpn.net/letthechildrencome or by calling 1-800-245-7894.

High School Essay Contest grand prize of $500 and three regional prizes of $100 each is available for students to explore the relationship between faith and public policy. Presented by the Washington Office of Mennonite Central Committee U.S., this contest promotes church-wide awareness of public policy issues by highlighting perspectives of Anabaptist youth. Students can choose to write about Palestine and Israel, immigration, or military spending. All essays must be submitted by December 17. The contest is open to youth of high school age who are Mennonite, Brethren in Christ, or Anabaptist, and to all youth who attend Mennonite high schools. More information, including instructions about where to send completed essays, is available at washington.mcc.org/advocate/essays.

Ecclesiastes, the latest book in the Herald Press Believers Church Bible Commentary series reveals some new thoughts. We have been told in our past that the message of the book of Ecclesiastes is that "life is meaningless and vain." But is that what the author is really saying? Not according to Douglas B. Miller, who says that we have been mistranslating the Hebrew word hebel. Miller contends—what the author of Ecclesiastes is really saying is that life is like a vapor, but people can face it by cultivating contentment, embracing community and generosity, advocating for the oppressed, showing prudence toward those in power, and, especially, enjoying God's gifts of work and pleasure. While conceding that this view is "certainly grim," Miller notes that "the author has not given up hope. He advises his readers how to make the most of their lives in the midst of such realities."

Skilled volunteers are invited to assist in building the Mennonite Church USA Elkhart offices which will also include offices for Mennonite Mission Network, Mennonite Education Agency, The Mennonite, and Mennonite Publishing Network. Volunteers are invited to help throughout various phases of the construction process through October 2011. Skills needed include framing, finish carpentry, cabinet installation, electrical, plumbing, masonry, drywall hanging and finishing, landscaping, concrete and painting. Housing will be arranged as needed. You can find schedule information and apply to volunteer on the project website: www.mennoniteusa.org/JoiningTogether.

ACC Leadership Transitions

Michelle Armster was ordained for Christian ministry at Blossom Hill Mennonite Church on Sunday, October 24, 2010. Michelle currently is serving as co-pastor at St. Andrew United Church of Christ, Lancaster. She also serves as co-director of MCC Conciliation Services. Michelle remains an active member of the Blossom Hill congregation and participates in the Lancaster cluster of ACC pastors.

Samuel Wanjau (Ruth) was approved for ordination by the ACC Ministerial Leadership Committee on Monday, August 31. Sam has served as founding pastor of the African Community Church of Lancaster (ACCL) since September 2001. He also is an individual and family therapist associated with Philhaven Behavioral Services. While serving as pastor at ACCL, Sam continues ministry connections with numerous churches and leaders in his native country of Kenya. Sam was originally ordained to Christian ministry through the African Inland Mission Association. A service date to formally recognize Sam's ordination held by ACC is yet to be confirmed.

Mark Weidner (Kay) started serving as "bridge pastor" at the Ridgeview Mennonite Church as of October 1. Mark and his wife Kay are members of the Akron Mennonite Church. Mark's previous ministry experiences have included serving as a pastor in several congregations and staff member at Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Elkhart, Ind.

Ray Yoder (Edna) completed an 18-month intentional interim pastorate with the Ridgeview Mennonite Church as of September 30. Ray's interim leadership was commended for his skills and spiritual vitality while guiding the congregation through evaluation of current ministries and anticipated arrival of a new long-term pastor in the near future.

Jeff Wright (Debbie) started serving October 1 as New Church Development Coach for Atlantic Coast Conference on a .25% employed time. This new position is meant to strengthen ACC's position coming alongside and coaching church planters and new church starts affiliated with ACC. Jeff has been serving in a similar ¼-time position relating to Eastern District Conference since February 2009. Jeff brings history of coaching and guiding new churches that are affiliated with Pacific Southwest Mennonite Conference representing a diverse ethnic and cultural history. Jeff serves as a part-time pastor at Madison Street Church, a Brethren in Christ congregation in Riverside, Calif. Jeff has been working closely with Urban Expression U.K., a ministry founded by Stuart Murray. Stuart and Jeff have been developing a ministry extension of Urban Expression in the U.S. called Urban Expression N. A. While living in Riverside, Jeff makes monthly trips to the eastern U.S. to meet with church planters one-on-one and has set up a toll-free phone connection for individuals to reach him. Part of Jeff's role with ACC is also to provide teaching and coaching for established churches interested in multiplication through church planting. Jeff can be reached at urban.anabaptist@gmail.com, 888-777-4842 or 951-687-6821 (office).

Native American Apology

We all have a context from which we emerge into adulthood, and it is fruitless to wallow in guilt and shame for wrongs perpetrated by our ancestors (spiritual or physical). However, as Lancaster Mayor Rick Gray suggested, we should be convicted by our understanding of justice to refuse to benefit from these wrongs. I don't know exactly how we do this. I have a great deal to reflect on and more history to read, more river-cane and antler arrows to make. I am left with a sense of awe and humility at the dignity and spiritual authority exhibited by a people who have been so profoundly wronged.

CURRENCY CORNER

Thanksgiving season is here and we think of being thankful to God for all the blessing he sends our way. For some, this year, the material blessing may not seem so great if a job has been lost or if the debt and house values do not match up.

When you look at how the words "thanks" and "thanksgiving" are used in the Bible, it seems that they are not tied so much to giving thanks for specific material possessions or things. Instead the thankfulness is directed more toward being thankful to God for his existence and our privilege to relate to God. An example of this is Psalm 100:4 NRSV "Enter his gates with thanksgiving, and his courts with praise. Give thanks to him, bless his name".

This great God that we can relate to truly has unlimited resources. He loves his children and notices everything that happens to them. Remember Psalm 24:1 NRSV "The earth is the Lord's and all that is in it, the world and those who live in it."

SEW Creative Stitchers Take on New Projects

Since their founding in the fall of 2009, the SEW Creative Stitchers of Tel Hai have kept themselves busy with a myriad of projects benefitting others.

In their sewing meetings on Monday mornings, they have sewn pillow cases for pediatric cancer patients and the Paoli Hospital's breast cancer support group and created child-sized hand-tied quilts for the youngsters under the protection of the Domestic Violence Center in West Chester. In the past months, new projects have come to their attention.

Group leader, Mary Margaret Ciccone (Shirley Walton's daughter), is an ER nurse at an eight-bed emergency center which is part of a county nursing home in rural Georgia.

The Retreat Home in Monticello was cited as one of 29 nursing homes in Georgia to receive a five-star rating from state inspectors. The needs of the 60 long-term care residents have been shared with the SEW Creative members who responded by creating catheter bag covers, calming blankets, and colorful pillow cases for mailing to their residents. Tel Hai residents and staff also provided items identified on a "wish list" provided by The Retreat's nursing staff.

Boxes of items are mailed every few months and the recipients have said it "feels like Christmas" every time one arrives. The mailings are coordinated through Tel Hai's Volunteer Services Director, Daphne Dampman Hurst. During the month of October 2010, Tel Hai residents and staff also collected new winter hats, gloves and scarves for the residents of The Retreat Home.

Closer to home, the sewers are providing residents of Heather Gardens, Tel Hai's secure care facility, with cloth coasters lined with impervious material to protect furniture from spills, placemats for the local Meals On Wheels recipients, and quilts for local veterans. New projects are often suggested in monthly meetings of the Calico Cutters quilting group of which Mrs. Walton is a member.

The SEW Creative group is happiest when making a difference for someone else. It seems there is no reason to doubt they will find new projects to keep their nimble fingers busy.

Landis Homes Shows Earth Care by Building Sustainably

Landis Homes, which opened in 1964, continues on a journey to be a good steward for the 110 acres of its campus located in the heart of Lancaster County farmland. This year with the opening of the south campus to new residents in cottage and hybrid homes, this pursuit has taken a new turn.

“We felt at home right away,” said Ruth Weaver in the cottage home she and her husband, Richard moved into on June 21, 2010. They are joined by residents in 22 more cottage homes—which are the first built on campus in the past 15 years. These are also the first homes on campus to incorporate new green building methods. These include:

- ♦ Geothermal Heat Pumps: Collects heat from within the earth during the winter and displaces heat back to the earth during the summer for cooling using an underground piping or “loop” system with approximately 70% of the energy used being renewable.
- ♦ Tubular Day-lighting: Brings daylight in to dark spaces so that residents can switch off electric lights during the day and enjoy the efficient and healthful natural lighting.
- ♦ Rainwater Harvesting: Collecting and storing rainwater from roofs of homes using rain barrels to reduce the use of domestic water for irrigating plants and storm water runoff.
- ♦ Solar Attic Fans: Uses the power of the sun to provide attic ventilation and costs nothing to operate.

In October, new neighbors to the cottage homes began moving into the hybrid homes next door which use the same sustainable building materials and practices.

The new hybrid homes received national recognition at the 2009 Design for Aging competition in the green/sustainable design category.

The American Institute of Architects (AIA) and the American Association of Homes and Services for the Aging (AAHSA) invited architects, designers, researchers and providers to submit projects and research for consideration in Design for Aging Review, 10th edition.

Two Landis Homes team members, Linford Good and Chris Kennel, received Green Advantage® Certification following a training session and preparation for taking a qualifying exam. Green Advantage’s mission is to certify building organizations and practitioners nationally and internationally.

The Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Green Building Rating System, provides a set of standards for environmentally sustainable construction. The certification achieved by Good and Kennel contributes to Landis Homes’ pursuit of a LEED rating. Good, in his role as Vice-President of Planning & Marketing and Kennel as Director of Construction Services give oversight to the construction.

These new homes will be the first of many in the area to achieve LEED certification. While the cottage homes in this first of three building phases are reserved, there is availability in the hybrid homes and in the cottage homes slated for the coming phases. Call Residency Planning for more information at 717-581-3935.

A Reflection on the Lancaster Roots 300 Native American Apology

Lloyd Hoover, Steve Lapp, Keith Wilson, and J. Richard Thomas delivered the Mennonite apology.

“I pray that the groups at work on these relationships will take meaningful actions, and that we might raise a generation, in light of dramatically shifting realities, who understands humans, land, and justice more fully.”

~ Keith Wilson

A quiet wildlife-rich marsh gives birth to a sleepy time-forgotten river called the Little Choptank which feeds the Chesapeake Bay on Maryland’s Eastern shore. I have been visiting a falling-apart small cottage on that quiet estuary since I was born.

My grandparents retired there that same year, but that house and the several wooded acres surrounding it were purchased by my great-grandfather in 1938. A century earlier, the land was part of the region’s largest plantation where many hundreds of slaves enriched the white landowners. That legacy began around 1610 when Europeans began “discovering” lands along the Chesapeake Bay.

While basking in the largely untouched tranquility of that place about one year ago, I began reading books which hinted at the murky human history, the blood that called out from the earth I easily shared with deer, heron, and fox.

I began to think about the land itself, how I see it today, the European concept of property, and the wealth that my ancestors would have seen in a plot of land, versus the communal sustenance that Native Americans would have seen. This protracted reflection even inspired me to take up some primitive skills, making simple bows and arrows from local materials.

I have been grieving as I wonder about the disappeared people whose feet walked where I stood to fish, the people who nourished themselves on the ancestors of the blue crab and perch I now catch and eat. I also felt a growing sense of responsibility regarding the dark history to which I am an heir, whether I like it or not. So I was honored, even though it was really the result of an afterthought and someone else’s scheduling conflict that I was asked to be present at an ecumenical apology to Native Americans in Lancaster.

I represented Atlantic Coast Conference alongside representatives of other local Mennonites as well as Presbyterians and Quakers. My blood heritage is Presbyterian in recent centuries, York County Quaker a few centuries before that, but I am now an Anabaptist by choice. So it was that I read the words of our shared Mennonite apology for a failure to speak out for justice on behalf of the 20 Conestoga Indians massacred in Lancaster by the Paxton Boys in 1763. I shared in apologizing for Mennonite complicity and even active involvement in the taking of land, and in the poaching of reservation game.

The experience was powerful and tangible for me. I was able, as a recent non-ethnic Mennonite, to take part in apologizing for a history I am otherwise disconnected from. I realize that any European American today shares in this historical injustice. What mattered far more to me on that day than the words prepared by Mennonites, Quakers, and Presbyterians (after all, Christians are professionals at feeling guilty), were the generous and honest spirits of the Native American individuals sharing from their hearts in response. While speaking forthrightly about 791 treaties which have been made and broken, these men and women wept with us and offered forgiveness to us, as it has been offered to all of us by our Creator.
